

Win & Deidre Paschke

I cannot understand why there is even such a debate about the early ending of suffering, about something that is entirely VOLUNTARY. Why would anyone oppose something that does not apply to them. I, for one, totally agree with the idea of voluntary euthanasia having seen both my wife's parents suffer through years and years of nursing homes. My wife is also in a bad way with constant pain that no amount of medication can relieve, now she has chronic kidney failure. All in all, not a great outlook, so an easy death is something to wish for. Why do some people think they have the right to deny us that wish? We do not impose our ideas on them. So, please, give us all what we want, the anti-VE people can have their wish and the pro-VE people can have theirs! What is stopping you? A win-win situation for all concerned, the ideal outcome!

Sent from my iPad