I writing in support of better resourcing of palliative care and in opposition to the legalisation of euthanasia and assisted suicide. Those who are most vulnerable need the most care and support. Consented removal of treatment is different to starving or hastening death. Furthermore, actively killing in these circumstances would be at odds with the goals of the medical profession and, in my opinion, immoral. The very sick or elderly could be pressured to 'stop being a burden'. We should instead emphasise the value of human life regardless of ability.
