The Secretary,

We did not create ourselves, life is a gift from outside of us, all life therefore should be treated with respect, care and compassion.

We do not have the right to take life.

Let us then work towards making the best possible palliative care available for all the sick and dying, this includes the best possible medical care combined with loving kind and compassionate care.

Life must be respected from its inception to its natural end here on earth.

As I said at the beginning we did not create ourselves, this is so obvious yet seems to receive scant consideration.

If we lose respect for life in all its stages then our society will decay.

We have the legislative means to remedy the situation, let our efforts be directed to this end and everyone will benefit.

Yours Sincerely,

Peter Hartin
[REDACTED]

I would be happy to appear at public hearing
