To those concerned with an Inquiry into End of Life Choices, including the possibility of Voluntary Assisted Dying:

May I urge you to assist all of those who find that to continue with their lives is untenable? During the past 20 years I have had 5 people, including my husband, beg me to help them die. These were dignified people who had led purposeful lives – all had loved life when they were well. Life in their condition was hateful to them with no meaning. My feeble answer to their pleas would always be, "I would if I could, but I can't".

So now I plead with you to help those who are in this condition.

One thing that those in control, politicians, law-makers etc don't understand is that many people have no intention of ending their lives, they just want to know that they can do it if they aren't capable of living a life.

Yours faithfully, Marty Morrison
