Although I am a resident of NSW I feel it may be of assistance to you to have an awareness of the number of "Australians" who care about the availability of "End of Life Choices", which is why I am writing. The extraordinary (and welcome) advances in modern medicine mean that lives are being extended well beyond the "Three score years and ten" we were advised about. Frequently this extension is accompanied by pain and misery. To extend unwanted lives "artificially" through medical intervention is in no one's interest, particularly when pain and suffering is increased. I urge those of you with decision making powers to enact laws which provide humane end of life choices.
