In June, 2009 my son Brian Cava was diagnosed with Motor Neuron Disease and had deteriorated so much in six months that he required palliative care. At that time he asked me to do something to stop the agony and help him die. By the time he died six months later, he looked like a cadaver, could not move a muscle and yet his brain was fully active. What a way to die!

We would never let an animal go through such agony and mental anguish and yet we force people to stay alive when all they want is to die.
