Dear Sir, Nobody really wants to end his life voluntarily. The only reason someone seeks to end his life like this is mainly to relieve pain. If people are supported and given proper pain control there would be no need to bring in this dangerous law. The other problem is that once brought into law nobody knows how many people will be killed without their consent. It's useless to say there will be safeguards in place- just see what happened with the abortion law! I think to call this 'End of Life. Choices' is grossly misleading. Who is going to make sure that it really is a CHOICE?
Yours sincerely,
Margaret Maher.
