Listen! It is about time people had control of their own time to die. I have been in Australia for 45 years and all that time we have been battling for an easy way to die. I have to admit that I have tried twice to end my life because I don't want to live any more. I am sick and tired of being part of a screwed up world which has no future. I am not terminal but still would like some assistance with my death. I do not fear death but look forward to it. My next attempt will not fail as I plan on going up to Mt Buffalo and picking a clean area to jump off. I should not have to do this but have no alternative. I have sources in India for Nembutal but think that I would be throwing my money away. I had to watch my father starve to death as he had a living will. I wanted to smother him but was afraid I would be caught and sent to prison to be molested by some big dude! My first wife died a horrible death at the age of 40 from lung cancer. Neither case was pleasant.

I want control of my own life and can see no reason why I shouldn't. Religious people can die how ever they want but keep their noses out of my life and death.

To All!

One's life should belong to them and to them only. If for any reason they do not want to live any more they should have the right to have access to an easy painless death. Everybody should have the right to their own death and when it takes place. If I ever get diagnosed with a terminal disease I definitely do not want palliative care. WHY? Because all it does is drag the process out and it creates stress for the rest of the family. I know as I have lost 4 family members from terminal diseases and I had to watch them starve or die from dehydration all with palliative care. What a wonderful and dignified way to leave the family!!

I personally have sourced Nembutal from India but didn't want to try to get it through customs as it would have been a waste of $250. I have ordered some Datura seeds from Spain and the USA but have yet to get them and I might not get them through customs but it is only going to put me out a few dollars. Once I get them I plan to grind them up and go out into the scrub and down the seeds with a bottle of Vodka along with a plastic bag to put over my head. Doesn't that sound civilized? Why should I have to do something like this all because I am sick of living??

My death should be my individual choice and everybody else can butt out and die by whatever means they themselves want. They can become terminal and have palliative care until they are in a coma or be in pain for prolonged periods of time because they believe that the Lord gave them life and only He/She/It can take it away – so be it.

I get so pissed off with , especially religious jerks, who push their values on my individual life.

All this crap has been going on for far too long.

Death should be an easy process that can be taken at any time one wishes.

There are 80,000,000 more humans coming on board next year – halleluiaah !!!!

Sincerely,

Sumner Berg
