I am a person who has lived with Multiple Sclerosis for 37 years I am well aware of the progression of the disease and have seen fellow suffers deteriorate so much that they cannot feed themselves or do the simplest tasks like wiping their bottoms and sometimes no longer recognise close relatives and friends.

At present I can still do these tasks but would not like to be in such a situation where I had to rely on others to keep me clean and fed. I should have the right to chose when the quality of life is so bad I can leave this world surrounded by friends knowing they can say good bye without threat of prosecution.

Sincerely
