Dear /sir Madam.

If I were to lose control of my mind, and or general body functions with associated health, I would be without any quality of life.

Accordingly I see no purpose of having to continue as a vessel of a living death until the occurrence of total collapse.

In so doing I would have become a burden not only to myself, but to my family and society. Politicians should have a much broader view of society, than the various powerful religious groups that are also entitled to their way of life, that should not however be allowed to effect (should it be necessary) my demise.

Off course safe guards are necessary.

Yours Faithfully
