Story

The conduct of Victoria's 2022 state election is being examined in a new public inquiry.

The Electoral Matters Committee will consider the views of candidates, parties, experts and the general public on how the election was conducted and will suggest how things could be improved.

The Committee wants to hear from the public about their experiences during the election, including their views on the enrolment and voting process, the behavior of parties and candidates during the election period, and the management of the election by the Victorian Electoral Commission.

The Committee is also seeking suggestions for possible improvements to Victoria's electoral system, including changes to the Upper House voting system.

If you have any feedback or suggestions related to the conduct of the election, you can make a written submission to the Committee.
