I have taught environmental Science in Primary schools for over ten years. My stance was always to start in the local area and encourage students to inquire into how they could help their local environment. After 20 years of picking up rubbish off local beaches I can understand children's frustration with the way government allows business to get away with littering our environment.

The only true solution to our current plastic overload is to stop it at the source. Manufacturers must be disallowed from putting plastic into circulation by making them pay for every piece of plastic trash they use if there is a cheaper solution they will use it.
