To the secretary, Keir Delaney,

This is my submission re coal seam gas:

To make any moves to allow coal seam gas is at the highest end of stupidity. For you and your committee to sit in the city on asphalt and cement and inflict your opinions on the rural sector leaves me cold with rage.

The evidence of what has happened in Queensland puts the underground water used in agriculture at risk. In the 1967 drought my father scraped the sandstone in the creek clean and the little hair springs supplied water for our cattle. YOU RISK THIS AT WHOSE COST? Clean green agriculture in South Gippsland does not want onshore gas extraction.

In an industry that sells gas to China for 8c/litre it has no morals to the welfare of the citizens. Say No. Any risk to the clean green agriculture should not be taken and if it is I hope you and your decision makers are the first to be concerned. However I know that it will be my cattle and your food that will bear the brunt of your indifference. To put the holy dollar ahead of the health and welfare of the rural community is ridiculous. Open your eyes and smell the roses before you poison them for the last time.

If it is so good for Victoria check out the ground in inner Melbourne and frack Collins St. Or Port Melbourne. Poison inner city gardens and see what reaction you get from the public.

If you cannot glean the angst and insecurity you are causing from this document then I would like to tell you in person the degree of upset you are causing.
