I am totally apposed to onshore CSG extraction in Australia. After seeing the environmental damage caused by gas fields in NSW and QLD I can't believe Victoria is even having this discussion. After seeing documentaries showing the damage caused by CSG operations in the USA I cannot believe that Australia ever followed their example. The promise of employment and money is not and should never be an incentive over preserving our water supply, our soils and our air purity not to mention the 'after effects' on a community when the initial 'boom' is followed by the depression of realising you are now living in an industrial estate, and the gas companies promises of 'good times for the community' were just propaganda with no long term value to any community. I am horrified by the idea that Victoria's soils, water sources and air could be prostituted for short term 'jobs and cash'. We live on the 2nd driest continent on the planet....just the threat to our underground water supply should be enough to stop this idea in it's tracks. We live on a farm next to a National Park and know how fragile the ecology is here already. Enough of this madness. Stop. Now. Please.
