In a country where drought is prevalent in food bowl areas I find it incomprehensible that any sort of unconventional mining would be allowed. From both the Australian and American experiences it has been shown to contaminate water, pasture and therefore animals and crops (if they will grow). This causes the break up of communities and loss of employment which the few jobs created will not replace for very long. It destroys tourism in parts of the country which rely on this form of income. But most of all it destroys our ability to produce enough food to feed the growing nation and also export for income. So I would beseech the inquiry to ban all unconventional mining especially the practice of "fracking" in this state for ever.
