I strongly object to mining for unconventional gas in my area, I am a small farmer in the area and value the quality of the environment. Mining for gas in the area will degrade the environment and the quality of farm produce here. Currently we get premium prices for farm produce because we take care of the land , the environment and the quality of our produce. The introduction of mining into this area puts all this at risk. The mining companies' priorities are profit for shareholders who have a minimal stake in our community and very little involvement. I urge you to secure the future of our farming, produce, and community by saying no to mining for unconventional gas in Gippsland. From what I know and read about unconventional gas mining, it is best carried out in an unpopulated area and an area that is not productive for farming. Australia has large tracts of land both unpopulated and unsuitable for farming. Yours sincerely, John Frayne
