Animal activist entries to farming properties as reported in the media are radical acts akin to acts of terrorism. The penalties that have been imposed have been grossly inadequate with the activists publicly saying they will continue their actions unabated. If this continues it will lead to a state of anarchy with dire consequences for law and order. Animal farming is an integral part of our sustainable food supply. Many areas of land are unsuitable for cropping because they are too steep, rocky or prone to erosion. Grazing animals are able to convert grass into high quality protein and without them major food shortages will develop not just here but globally.
