

Inquiry Name: Inquiry into the Impact of Animal Rights Activism on Victorian Agriculture

SUBMISSION CONTENT:

The activity of whistle-blowers exists simply due to the lack of transparency by the animal agriculture industry. If there is nothing to hide by these industries, they would have no issue inviting the media in so that the public can see what occurs. The reality is that every time whistle-blowers enter one of these places, they request that farmers allow the media inside to show the public what is happening behind the doors of these sheds. The usual response is that the farmer denies the request.

The whistle-blowers do not have the intention of entering the residents house while on these properties, they are simply there to document the suffering of animals in intensive farming situations. The public has the right to know how the food they eat got to their table and without the industry being transparent, how will they find out?
