My partner Trevor Fowles decided to take his grandson to Gypy farm for lunch. When they arrived it had been closed due to animal right activists invading the café/farm and taking the animals. His grandson was devastated and so was Trevor, as he had wanted to show his grandson how they operated and how kind they are to the animals.
My brother Sean Judd, was straight onto this, and organised a motor bike rally involving Melina Bath, member for eastern Victoria and other important people to get some action in the way of implementing a law against activists from doing this and applying the correct penalties associated with this crime. A $2 penalty is a disgrace. This rally was televised and has some great media coverage.
I am extremely saddened by the chaos and destruction the actions of these people caused our farmers and a lot of other business people. I set about helping by gathering signatures, taking all the photo's, and involving my business to ensure that Melina Bath has the support she needs to pass this motion.
I will happily do whatever we need to do as business owners and local citizens of Latrobe Valley, to ensure this motion is passed.
