Inquiry Name: Inquiry into the Impact of Animal Rights Activism on Victorian Agriculture

There needs to be transparency within the animal agriculture industry, presently there is none. Animals in this industry are often treated unnecessarily cruelly. They cannot speak or defend themselves and presently no one sees their suffering. I believe the public should see how animals are treated in this industry ie. CCTV instalment where the treatment of animals are monitored. Animal activists historically have entered these facilities peacefully and thoughtfully with bio security outfits to get video evidence to show the public what happens in these industries and how 'their' food is produced. If not for activists the way in which animals are treated on farms, abattoirs, feed lots would not be available to the general public.
