Subject: Impact of Animal Rights Activism on Vic Agriculture

To Whom It May Concern

After recently signing a petition for the Victorian Government to protect farmers from animal activists I am submitting my comments on the above to the Economy & Infrastructure Committee in Legislative Council.

I don't have any specific activism on my property, but my farm is on the map for "Aussie Farms". There is no reason for my farm to be there, other than the above activism group causing mischief. My sharefarmers are very diligent in their animal husbandry and we take offence at the farm being on this map.

I haven't requested that Aussie Farms remove my farm from their map for fear that it would bring attention to our property and make the situation worse. We haven't had any trespassing by activists, but it is concerning that our address is available to them.

How can a website have the name "Aussie Farms" when it is exactly the opposite?

Yours faithfully
