To whom it may concern,

As an international student at the University of Melbourne, I believe that the extension of Free Tram Zone to universities is significant for helping all students access their education. We belong to vulnerable groups and many of us are struggling with financial difficulties. Everyday transport cost can be heavy financial burden for many university students. I genuinely hope that the authorities could expand the Free Tram Zoo to mitigate living stress and anxiety of all students including domestic and international, undergraduates and postgraduates. In this way, that could also enhance the health and happiness of those young students so that they would make more contribution to society in return.

Sincerely,

Yenn.
