The free tram zone is an important initiative that sends a message of access and participation to all those living or visiting Melbourne. Extending this zone to cover transport to The University of Melbourne (UoM) sends the right messages of valuing education and the contribution of students and staff to the City of Melbourne. In the 2030 Strategic Plan for the UoM, the University's location and alliance with the greater Melbourne area is recognised as an integral part of what will make us all able to continue more effectively to a better future. Extending the tram zone to the UoM also underlines the City of Melbourne's commitment to the UoM's Carlton Connect full accessible precinct. We all want Melbourne to (continue to) be recognised as a forward-thinking, inclusive, liveable city.
