Extending the free tram zone is a good idea. My submission is that you consider the location of universities and tertiary education schools in and near the CBD. For example, Melbourne University entrance at Swanston Street is only a few short stops from RMIT in Swanston Street which is the end of the free tram zone. I see students here regularly caught and fined for not paying their fares. It is similar on the #57 tram when students go to TAFE colleges in and around North Melbourne. Money could ultimately be saved by having fewer fare checkers on the payroll.
