To Whom It May Concern,

The extension of the free tram zone to encompass university campuses in South Bank and Parkville will reflect favourably on legislative parties as well as those directly affected by the change.

The re-zoning will benefit domestic and international students, many of whom are uncertain of zoning, and will also assist those post-undergraduate students whose travel remains unsubsidised by the government.

Re-zoning the free tram zone will also act as an incentive for visitors to view the campuses in favourable lights, especially those called upon to lecture or act as guest speakers.

Finally, this decision will reflect positively on a government prioritising education and its accessibility to those unable to work a fulltime job as well as those conducive to the learning of others.

Sincerely yours,
Greta Lukavic
