The free tram zone is an insult to fare paying passengers and should be abolished. I use the 57 tram to / from the city from North Melbourne when visiting family. It is often so crowded that you cannot even get on at Melbourne Central. By the time the freeloaders get off at Vic Market (quite often having travelled only one or 2 stops) the tram is practically empty. Why should fare paying passengers have to put up with crush load conditions or even missing their service entirely so that a bunch of people can freeload off the system?
