Presently it feels as though the exclusion of Swanston St between Melbourne Central and Melbourne University is a deliberate tactic to raise revenue from students. Geographically, there does not seem to be any real logic to stopping the zone here (especially since it extends all the way out to Docklands). This is concerning, as students are those most in need of free transport, as they have been consistently shown to be a vulnerable and sometimes poverty stricken demographic.

Stopping the free tram zone at Melbourne Central also assumes the 'end' of the CBD, which assumes a small CBD and does not allow for expansion and progress.
