To whom it may concern,

Having had animal friends as pets for most of my life I have always held the RSPCA in high regard for their care for them.

It seems like the antithesis of care for animals when only some are protected and others are just left in danger and hurt or killed for all kinds of reasons. Who is there to protect them if not us... and the RSPCA is the body that we have relied on to so this... for a very long time

POCTA needs urgent revision. Protection is needed for all animals, not just a few selected ones.

We need an Independent Office for Animal Welfare or the legislation and its application will continue to fail to ensure the welfare of the species that are so vulnerable to human exploitation.

So many animals used for sport and experimentation, and even entertainment. Still other animals are turned into food and clothing.

The connection here with human violence is well-established.

It would be such a good use of public funds if a truly Independent Office for Animal Welfare were established.

Please show the better side of humanity. Make a path available for genuine concern for some of the most vulnerable inhabitants of our country. Help make the world a better place.

Very Sincerely,
Barbara Ramsay
