It is clear to me the RSPCA in recent years have moved in a concerning direction where they are directing their funding efforts towards activism against lawful activities most notably Duck Hunting. If that is the direction they want to go in then fine but they must give up their powers in enforcing the prevention of cruelty to animal laws as well as their Government funding. In my view the best path for the RSPCA going forward is to go back to the core part of their operations and that is investigating cruelty to domestic animals and finding homes for abandoned pets and in the meantime sheltering those pets.
