I am a Canberra citizen.

I live next to a Nature Resrve, and enjoy the beauty of a small group of walleroos, wallabys, kangaroos, each day, because as a photographer, i can bring them up close and see their beauty. As a result, I have become protective of them.

Most people cant see them, they are too far away, and so 'out of sight, out of mind' is the norm, and allow off-leash dogs to chase and molest these precious native animals.

Australians, for the most part, are separate and disconnected from the natural world, and so we allow all manner of violence and degradation to happen. This is reflected in the governments choices to favour dollars instead of the preservation of the natural world.

The government rape and molest habitats all over Australia, taking, taking, taking, and there goes our animals, one by one their land is taken.

Until there is a responsible government who is very much prioritising the preservation of all native forests from now on, the cancelling of logging contracts and development contracts, then how can things ever change.

The government is 'out-of-sight-out-of-mind', about this issue, and is responsible for what is happening.
