

Splendid that the Victorian Government can set such a good example to other states by launching the inquiry into the extinction crisis that is urgently needed before the point of no return! It is after all the greatest threat of an extinction of more animals and plants than ever known in human history. The Government's action points to the reality that change is possible, something so positive in our somewhat despairing times.

Ann Gillison Gray