

From: [REDACTED]
To: planninginquiry
Date: Saturday, 29 January 2022 9:56:33 AM

Refer to Michael Buxton (Emeritus Professor of Environment and Planning RMIT) article in The Age November 20, 2021 headlined The assault by stealth. I would call it theft by stealth.

Another article in The Age November 12, 2021 headlined Melbourne the nation's house demolition capital by Noel Towell shows the destructive nature of the planning policies in Melbourne.

I have witnessed the demolition of so many period homes ranging from 2 bedroom duplex houses to larger family homes it is sickening. They are replaced by apartment blocks with a density that creates environmental damage. The councillors at Stonnington Council like to refer to it as "emerging neighborhood character". I refer to it as "emerging slums"

Max Berriman

[REDACTED]