Other countries have very strict rubbish collection policies. Paid rubbish bags encourage citizens to try and put the least amount of rubbish into landfill as it will cost them more in rubbish bags. I would also like all councils to have composting facilities so that citizens can put their food scraps in the green bin for collection. If councils were selling organic compost for gardening or using it instead of fertilisers on green spaces, savings could be made or costs evened up. Thirdly, the government should create laws to discourage industrial food producers from over packaging their products.
