Are there any additional themes we should consider?

Stop the sell off of public land. There is no such thing as 'surplus' land. Selling public land is stealing from future taxpayers. Use money from stamp duty to fund building and maintaining public housing. This investment is the best way for long-term dignity and housing security. Subsidising private landlords is no long-term solution. Deductions for negative gearing should be capped at a maximum of two properties. People can still own more properties - but not with public subsidy.

YOUR SUBMISSION

Submission:

Public housing is an essential investment in human dignity and security. Housing is a prerequisite to being a fully functioning taxpayer. It is cheaper on the taxpayer at all levels to fund housing first to obviate future expenditure on crisis management.

Do you have any additional comments or suggestions?:

Public housing must be the priority. Social and Community housing should not be funded at the expense of public housing. We need effective legislation to ensure that future housing developments must include at least 40% guaranteed affordable dwellings.
