YOUR SUBMISSION

I am a long time Marijuana smoker. I have used it moderately since my teens and I am now 73 years. With Marijuana being illegal it puts the sale and cultivation of the plant into the criminal realm. It is then associated with other drugs which may be more harmful. Drug dealers will work to move clients onto addictive substances to ensure continued sales. This may include mixing the Marijuana with a more potent substance.

I prefer to grow my own plants (two a year is all I need) so that I have quality control.

I am not addicted in any way. I have had times in my life where I did not use it.

Ten years ago I had my stomach removed because of cancer. This means that I do not feel the sensation of hunger. I know that Marijuans does restore my hunger feelings meaning that I am drawn to eat.

I asked my doctor about getting medical marijuana prescribed, and he answered that the paperwork was very difficult, so I should get it on the streets.

I cannot drink alcohol because of my condition so marijuana is my recreational drug.

In my experience marijuana is a preferable social drug to alcohol. It does not cause violence and aggression.
