YOUR SUBMISSION

Submission:

The research and real world applications is clear: access to legal, regulated marijuana has positive effects on the public as well as increasing tax revenue for the state. Marijuana is essentially the same as alcohol except you cannot overdose from it and there's never been a direct death associated with it. Addiction should be treated as a mental illness.

This will also reduce the drug trade, money going to illegal dealers/producers and create a better quality end product which can help the public through a number of issues from numbing pain to muscle relaxation to other rare illnesses that can be treated.
