Power is in the favour of the landlord now. For every property there are so many people wanting to rent it. Tenant VS tenant to get in. That's why we need public housing. Without public housing we will have no options except private properties and private landlords. Then they can charge what they want. That's why we have to keep public housing. To give an option and have a level playing field. A public tenant friend has said that after the bulldozing and the redevelopment has been completed- this could take years-they've been told they might be coming back to a different landlord, not the Office of Housing, but social and community housing. What do these words mean? I don't know. The government doesn't tell us anything. We have to guess what's going on. Everything should be in a written contract translated into different languages. We have to assume they will do the right thing. And the word ASSUME when you break it down makes an ass out of you and me. Politicians are all as bad as each other. Im a public tenant living on a walkup estate. I expect to live out my days here in peace and harmony. My home suits me because I have health issues and all my medical services are close by.
