Inquiry into environmental infrastructure for growing populations

The Legislative Assembly Environment and Planning Committee is inviting community input on the environmental infrastructure that Victorians need as our population grows in Melbourne and key regional centres.

The inquiry will look at community access to parks and open space, sporting fields, forest and bushland, wildlife corridors and waterways.

This social media pack can be used to encourage community input to this inquiry.

STORY

Rapid population growth in Melbourne and key regional centres has transformed our state, with benefits as well as challenges. The preservation of our state's environmental infrastructure is one of those challenges. While COVID-19 has recently led to a slowing of population growth, it has also highlighted the importance of people being able to access parks and open space in their local neighbourhoods.

This inquiry is seeking community input on what can be done to enhance the amenity of our suburbs and key regional centres, considering both recent and future development across our state.
