

From: Inquiry into Tackling Climate Change in Victorian Communities
[REDACTED]
Sent: Sunday, 25 August 2019 8:56 AM
To: ClimateChangeInquiry
Subject: New Submission to Inquiry into Tackling Climate Change in Victorian Communities

Inquiry Name: Inquiry into Tackling Climate Change in Victorian Communities

Ms Cori Nelson
[REDACTED]

SUBMISSION CONTENT:

--

25/8/19

Dear Committee Members,

Thank you for the opportunity to make a submission on the critical and immediate topic of Tackling Climate Change in Victorian Communities.

Myself and thousands of individuals in Victorian communities are currently tackling climate change by having switched to a plant-based diet, or are in the process of doing so. These plant-based/vegan community support and education groups can be found via social media platforms such as Facebook and Meetup, among others.

It is widely known, as proven by science and reported by top governing bodies, that farmed animal agriculture, also part of an inhumane, unhealthy and unsustainable food system, is one of the top contributors to the global warming catastrophe.

The top strategy we can all use to tackle climate change, and the one that the Victorian government should be implementing with utmost urgency, is assisting farmers and all Victorians to transition away from farmed animal agriculture production and consumption.

Sincerely,

Cori Nelson

--

File1:

File2: