Two major recommendations in Facing the Truth

Current Laws

Current laws
Under current laws, mandatory reporting to DHS applies when a mandated reporter forms a reasonable belief that a child is at risk, for example because a complaint is made of recent child abuse. Doctors, nurses and teachers are currently mandated to report.

Church proposal
The Church proposes that mandatory reporting be extended to clergy and religious, so that they are required to report to DHS. The reporting obligation applies regardless of the identity of the accused. It includes circumstances where the accused is another member of the clergy or religious.

When a child is at risk

Mandatory reporting
A mandated reporter forms a reasonable belief that a child has been abused or is at risk of abuse (e.g. current allegation).

A victim can choose to report to police.

A third party is not legally obliged to report an allegation to police. This person can choose to report to the police, unless the victim wants to remain anonymous.

When the complaint does not pose a current risk to children

Current laws
Where a child is not at risk, which is the case in most complaints to the police by an adult victim, there is no obligation under current laws to report crimes to police or DHS. The law recognises the right of adults to decide whether to report allegations.

Church proposal
The Church proposes that any third party who becomes aware of allegations of criminal abuse must report the allegations to the police, even when adult victims want their privacy protected and do not want to report their complaint to police. A mechanism is required to protect the privacy of the victim.
