My name is Andrew Le [REDACTED] and I thought it was important, following the weekend, a weekend with multiple music festival choices, where there seems to be a general widespread understanding that there would be use of illicit substances, weekends in remote locations where it would be difficult to assist someone requiring serious medical attention. What I am getting at here is that harm reduction and pill testing are so imperative and need to be streamlined in the same way VIC GOVT has dealt with medical marijuana. This festival season my friends dealt with mdma capsules laced with methamphetamine, which led to four of them leaving home early and one in hospital, and it was an instance that could have been so easily avoided if we were more honest about the potential of drug use taking place and better availability of testing kits

Too many are imprisoned for a common place aspect of human society, and certain drugs really should be decriminalised at least.
