

Christianne Andonovski

From: Georgie Taylor <wordpress@wp.greens.org.au>
Sent: Friday, 17 February 2017 9:46 AM
To: LRRCS
Subject: Kids are going to take drugs regardless

RE: INQUIRY INTO DRUG LAW REFORM

Kids are going to take drugs regardless

Drug culture isn't a new thing. I would say at least a small percentage of those opposed to pill testing have tried an illicit drug at some point in their life. Most likely when they were young and invincible and carefree. The same young carefree spirit that still motivates young people to take drugs that kill them. They don't have a death wish and although you are playing Russian roulette when you take illicit drugs, they don't think it will kill them. Those opposing pill testing argue that money should be utilised better educating young people not to take drugs as well as policing those involved manufacture and distribution. Definitely keep fighting the good fight but in the meantime why not give pill testing a chance to save someone's life.

-- Georgie Taylor

I'm happy for my submission and details to be made public.