The state of many country roads in this state is that they are bordering on dangerous for the motorists safety. Vicroads would rather put up signs saying either "Rough surface ahead" or "Reduced speed ahead" instead of repairing the road sections.

The Government blames most country road incidents on motorists speeding so they can put more revenue cameras in. The government also thinks the Victorian boundary is where Melbourne ends.