Victorian country roads used to be superior to interstate roads, this is now the reverse. Victorian roads are now in a very poor condition, a possible reason SUV's are popular. I believe country roads would be in a better condition if a government body was responsible for inspecting roads, prioritizing maintenance work and for the quality of work. I strongly believe the persons responsible for inspecting road surface condition must drive a small car such as a VW Polo, or Toyota Yaris to truly assess our poor road condition. Not an SUV or Landcruiser which absorb poor road surfaces with ease.
