Mr Edward O'Donohue

Dear Sir,

I ask that no further provisions be added to the Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act 2006 and that no new rights be added.

The definition of rights results in their being restricted, and the consequent interpretation by an unelected judiciary of their meaning distorts the original intent.

It would be best if the Charter were totally repealed and leave it to the law to protect citizens under an elected parliament.

Yours sincerely,

[Signature]

(Paul Dickson)